A Culture of Caring for You

A Culture of Caring for You

Many of us with aging parents also have kids, jobs, and other important responsibilities. Too often, adult children believe that they can take care of everything themselves – and feel an enormous responsibility to do so. Our home health service is one line of our connected care network. Home health provides compassionate nurses and therapists to help you recover from your illness and/or surgery with the goal to work with you in restoring your health and wellness.

Our Services include:

Skilled Nursing

Licensed nurses collaborate frequently with physicians to provide medical management of acute and chronic illnesses. An individualized plan of care is developed to provide education on disease processes, treatment(s)/procedure(s), prevention strategies and coordination of care of services with physicians and other health care team members.

Occupational Therapy

Your ability to perform activities of daily living (ADL) is evaluated. We also check your home environment for hazards or barriers to help identify equipment needs. You learn new skills or are retrained in once familiar daily activities that have been lost due to an illness or injury.

We are here to meet and exceed your needs.

Medical Social Worker

A medical social worker works with you to identify support services. These may include short-term counseling services, referral to and coordination with community resources and assistance with living arrangements, finances and long-term planning.

Physical Therapy

Your mobility and strength is important. We work to restore your mobility and strength by exercise, massage, and other methods.

Home Health Aides/Certified Nursing Assistants

Your services are delivered under the supervision of a RN or licensed therapist. Home health aides are assigned for specific personal care needs on a part-time basis at home.

Speech Therapy

Often speech disorders are the result of trauma, surgery or stroke. Our Speech Therapist develops a speech therapy program to improve or restore speech/language disorders utilizing specialized therapeutic techniques and/or equipment.
